Apr 3, 2016 - Takahiro Kimura, born in Fukuoka Prefecture, Japan, in 1965, is a Japanese animator, illustrator and character designer. He studied painting at the Polytechnic University of Salesian, Ecuador. The project "1000 broken faces" was launched in 1999 and unfinished to this day (up to now ~ 400 portraits). The idea is to destroy the shape of the face and cut him into a 1000 pieces.

This striking family portrait illustration is a great example of that because the people are upside down so that we can't quite read their faces easily, making them peripheral. Meanwhile, the dog, who is in the centre of the portrait and is the right way up, becomes the focal point. Portrait Illustration Inspiration From Envato Tuts+
